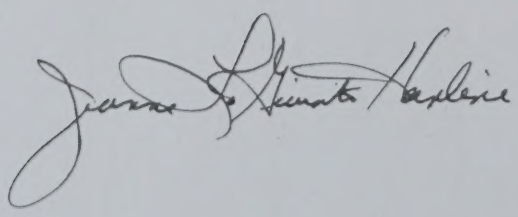
FOREWORD



It is with great pleasure that we present the 2009 Edition of The Official Catholic Directory. It remains the premier resource for matters relating to the Catholic Church in the United States of America.

In this edition we have included special sections highlighting areas of interest for our readers. There are two retrospectives on Pope Benedict XVI and St. Paul, which review our recent history and apostolic past. There are articles that focus on our future including the events of World Youth Day and trends in Catholic higher education. And there are articles that present the beauty and history of Rome and the Holy Land.

Along with Volume One, we have included The Official Catholic Directory, Part II in your subscription. Produced in the fall, this CD contains updates and new listings not present in the main volume along with the archdioceses and dioceses of the world reprinted with permission from the Vatican. In addition the Pilgrimage Guide provides historical and regional data on specific sites both nationally and internationally.

While we strive to produce a concise and accurate volume, nothing would have been accomplished without the help and cooperation of the many ecclesiastical authorities, diocesan officials, religious and laity who were instrumental in organizing the substantial amount of information needed to publish a successful directory. We would like to thank them all for their tireless work and invaluable assistance.

Sincerely,

Jeanne LoGiurato Hanline

Pope Benedict XVI Year in Review: 2008

By John Thavis

VATICAN CITY (CNS) -- For Pope Benedict XVI, 2008 was the year of St. Paul, the year of the Bible and the year of the United States.

Amid the hundreds of papal meetings and events, those three themes stood out in special focus as 2008 drew to a close.

In June, the pope opened a jubilee year to celebrate the 2,000th anniversary of the birth of St. Paul. Accompanied by Ecumenical Patriarch Bartholomew of Constantinople and other representatives of Orthodox and Anglican churches, he said the apostle was a model of missionary courage for people struggling against religious indifference in modern society.

In October, the pope presided over a three-week Synod of Bishops on the Word of God that explored ways to bring Catholics closer to the Bible and promote better use of Scripture in liturgy and catechesis. Closing the assembly, the pope emphasized that the church's missionary activity will fall flat unless it is nourished by scriptural reading and understanding.

The pope will now write a follow-up document based on the synod's 55 final propositions, which included a proposal to admit women to the official ministry of lector, or Scripture reader, at Mass.

In April, Pope Benedict made his first papal visit to the United States, spending six days in Washington and New York and addressing the U.N. General Assembly. Among the highlights were a private meeting with victims of clergy sex abuse, Masses at baseball stadiums in both cities and a solemn visit to ground zero to pray for victims of the Sept. 11 attacks.

During his U.S. visit, the pope took aim at what he called the "attack of a new secularism" that threatens to undermine traditional moral values and the voice of religion in public affairs. American society is at a moral crossroads, he told his listeners, as it faces problems such as social alienation and anger, increased violence and "forgetfulness of God."

The pope's clear and repeated condemnation of sex abuse in the United States was echoed during his July trip to Australia, where he joined more than 200,000 young Catholics from 170 countries for World Youth Day celebrations. Before leaving the country, he celebrated a private Mass with Australian victims of clergy sex abuse.

His visit to Australia was the longest foreign trip in duration and distance. Addressing cheering throngs of young people, he urged them to give themselves to Jesus and told them: "In so many of our societies, side by side with material prosperity, a spiritual desert is spreading: an interior emptiness, an unnamed fear, a quiet sense of despair."

In June, President George W. Bush paid a visit to the Vatican, in a sense returning the pope's visit to the White House two months earlier. The two leaders spoke privately and then, in a break with protocol, took an informal walk through the Vatican Gardens.

Although the pope and the Vatican steered clear of involvement in the U.S. presidential election campaign, as soon as it was over the pope sent a message to President-elect Barack Obama, congratulating him and offering prayers for him and the entire country.

Pope Benedict's third foreign trip of 2008 was to France, where he celebrated Mass for an overflow crowd in Paris and visited the Marian shrine of Lourdes, where he commemorated the 150th anniversary of Mary's apparitions at the site.

China was clearly on the pope's mind in 2008. In May, he welcomed China's Philharmonic Orchestra to the Vatican, saying he wanted to extend a hand of friendship to the country. Later that month, he let the Chinese people know he was praying for them following a deadly earthquake.

The pope also established May 24 as the world day of prayer for the church in China. The text this year expressed the hope that Catholics in China would never live in fear of spreading the Gospel.

The church in Iraq suffered increasing anti-Christian violence and intimidation, and the pope deplored the death of Chaldean Catholic Archbishop Paulos Faraj Rahho of Mosul, who was found dead in March, two weeks after being kidnapped. In July, the pope discussed the worsening situation with Iraqi Prime Minister Nouri al-Maliki.

In India, a deadly wave of anti-Christian violence in Orissa state prompted a papal appeal for greater government protection.

In interreligious affairs, the pope helped arrange a new chapter in Catholic-Muslim dialogue when the Catholic-Muslim Forum met at the Vatican in November. Addressing participants, he said members of both faiths have a common obligation to defend human rights and help the world's suffering.

In a meeting in October with the International Jewish Committee on Interreligious Consultations, the pope said

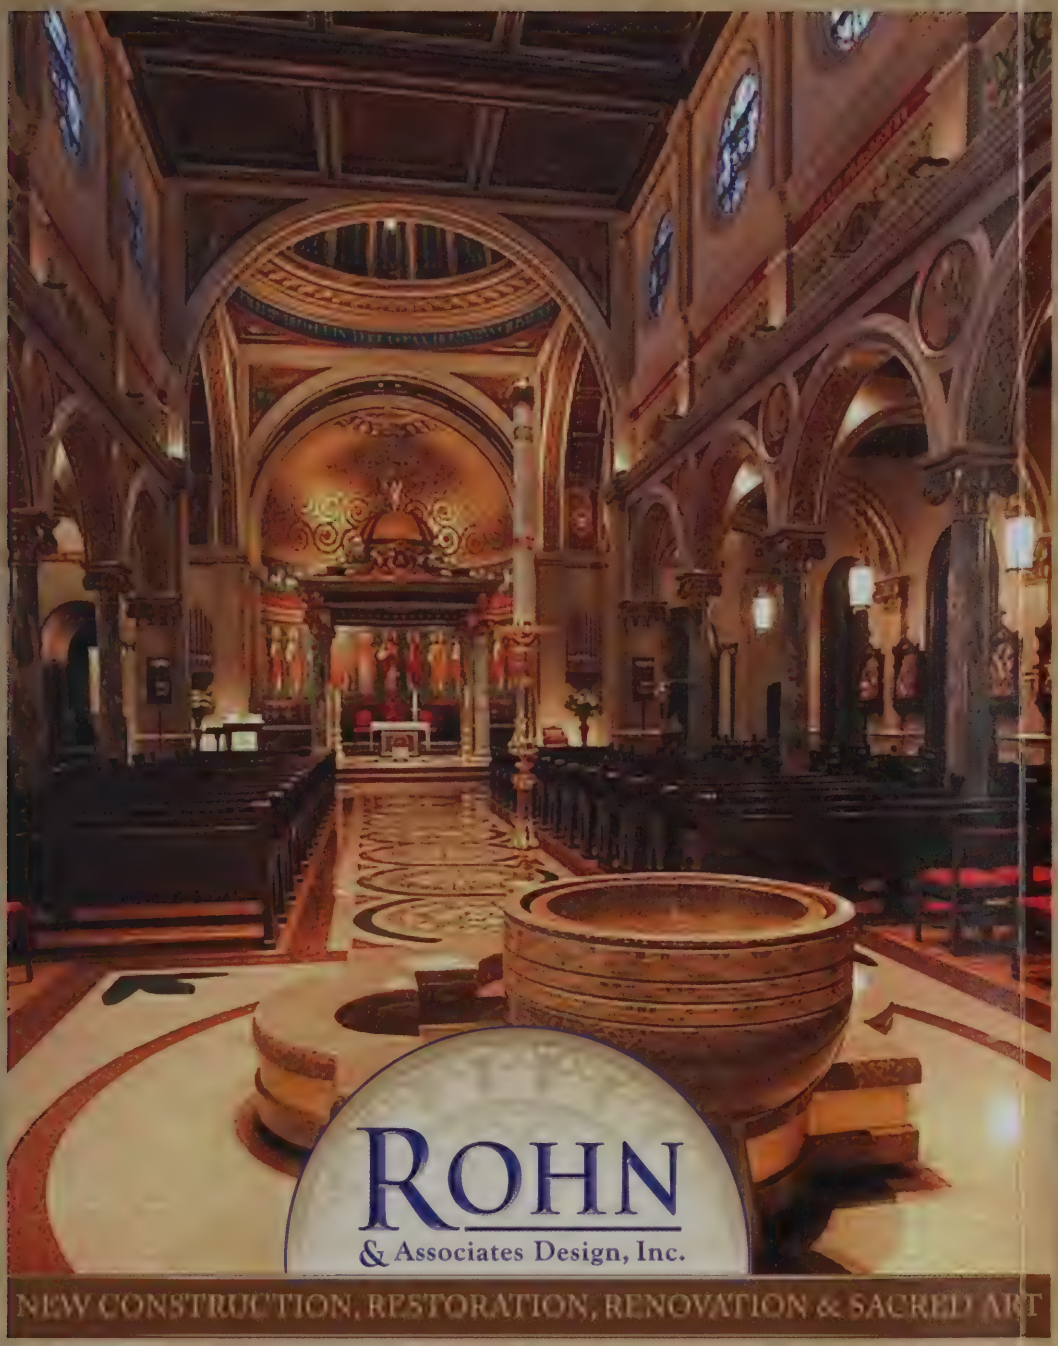
Catholic-Jewish dialogue was a "sacred duty." The meeting was shadowed in part by continuing controversy over the sainthood cause of Pope Pius XII. At a Mass Oct. 9 to commemorate the 50th anniversary of Pope Pius' death, the pope defended the late pope's efforts to help Jews during World War II; at the same time, he has put Pope Pius' cause on hold while the church reflects more deeply on the issue, Vatican officials announced.

In liturgical matters, Pope Benedict introduced some changes to papal Masses; for one thing, those receiving Communion from the pope now receive the host on the tongue while kneeling. He also approved optional wordings for the dismissal at Mass and was considering a proposal to move the sign of peace to a different part of the liturgy.

The pope issued no encyclicals or other major teaching documents in 2008, yet in talks to parishes, politicians and church organizations he focused increasingly on two themes: economic justice and the environment.

When international leaders met twice for financial consultations during the year, he urged them to tackle global poverty with courage and to honor the commitments made in 2000 toward structural relief to poorer countries.

To the church's own faithful, he hammered home what has become a favorite theme: that the practice of real-world charity is a litmus test of Christian faith, and that those facing God's final judgment will have to respond to questions like, "Did you feed me when I was hungry?"



As the global economic crisis worsened during the year's second half, the pope reminded financial institutions of their duty to put people before profits. He also reminded people that modern ideals of money and material success are passing realities, saying: "Whoever builds his life on these things — on material things, on success, on appearances — is building on sand."

In Australia, in the northern Italian mountains and at the Vatican, the pope also spoke frequently about the need to safeguard creation. To World Youth Day participants, he emphasized that the morality of environmental protection flows from God's plan for creation as a whole.

In October, at the increasingly "green" Vatican City, he saw the installation of a new solar-panel roof at the Vatican's audience hall.

Year of Saint Paul Retrospective

By John Thavis

He is known as the model of Christian conversion and the archetypal missionary, the most prolific of the early apostles, the man who took the Gospel of Christ into the world of non-Jews and helped set the church on a more universal path.

Two thousand years after his birth, St. Paul was honored in a jubilee year lasting from June 28, 2008, to June 29, 2009. Pope Benedict XVI proclaimed the "Year of St. Paul" and almost single-handedly gave the jubilee its content — in talks and homilies, liturgical celebrations and indulgences for pilgrims who walked in the footsteps of the "Apostle of the Gentiles."

With local churches joining in the commemoration, the result was a global mosaic of Pauline activities that ranged from top-level biblical conferences in Europe and the United States, pastoral letters in places like China and Cambodia, and the first missionary congress in Pakistan.

Pope Benedict chose to highlight St. Paul for one primary reason: he wanted to reinvigorate the sense of mission among the world's 1.1 billion Catholics. For the pope, the Apostle Paul embodied an evangelizing spirit based on personal conversion.

"Dear brothers and sisters, as in early times, today too Christ needs apostles ready to sacrifice themselves. He needs witnesses and martyrs like St. Paul," the pope said when he proclaimed the jubilee.

"Paul, a former violent persecutor of Christians, when he fell to the ground dazzled by the divine light on the road to Damascus, did not hesitate to change sides to the Crucified One and followed him without second thoughts. He lived and worked for Christ, for him he suffered and died. How timely his example is today!"

The pope was convinced that, like St. Paul, committed Christians have a duty to share and communicate the saving message of the Gospel to all people. But he was worried that in a world that considers tolerance a supreme virtue, many contemporary Catholics had lost this missionary drive.

Pope Benedict also wanted to turn a spotlight on one of Rome's oft-neglected patriarchal churches, the Basilica of St. Paul's Outside the Walls.
At the beginning of the jubilee year, Vatican officials announced that archeologists had confirmed that the tomb of St. Paul — a rough-hewn marble sarcophagus — had been identified beneath the main altar of the basilica. It could not be opened because it was literally buried in the church's architecture, but the news helped draw increasingly large crowds along a special Pauline pilgrimage route in Rome.

"Who was this Paul?"

The Year of St. Paul unfolded on many levels, and it was Pope Benedict who led the way. At the vespers service opening the jubilee, the pope gave the event a strong ecumenical tone by inviting leaders of other Christian churches, including Orthodox Ecumenical Patriarch Bartholomew of Constantinople, the spiritual head of the Orthodox churches, and many who had come from areas where St. Paul evangelized — in the Holy Land, Syria, Greece, Cyprus and Asia Minor.

At the prayer service, Pope Benedict asked: "Who was this Paul?" The pope spent the next year answering the question.

Born in Tarsus, in what is today part of modern Turkey, St. Paul grew up in a Jewish family and became a tent-maker by trade. Said to be present at the stoning of St. Stephen, the first martyr, he became a zealous persecutor of Christians throughout the Roman lands of the eastern Mediterranean and Asia Minor.

On the way to arrest Christians in Syria, as recounted in Scripture, St. Paul was blinded temporarily by a vision of Jesus Christ. As he recovered in Damascus, he was "filled with the Spirit" and was baptized. He eventually made a series of four major missionary journeys that stretched from Jerusalem to Rome, where he was finally put to death by Roman authorities.

In his opening homily and a series of 21 weekly audience talks, Pope Benedict probed more deeply into the apostle's life and faith, beginning with his dramatic conversion based on a personal encounter with Jesus Christ. The pope explained: "His faith is not a theory, an opinion about God and the world. His faith is the impact of God's love on his heart."

St. Paul knew that announcing the Gospel required courage and was never free from struggle, and that the truth must not be hidden in order to obtain a "superficial harmony," the pope said. The apostle also knew that evangelizing required sacrifice, and that "in a world in which the lie is powerful, truth is paid in suffering," the pope said.

As Pope Benedict drew St. Paul's personal and theological portrait, he emphasized the lessons for people today: "This is the aim of the Pauline year: to learn about St. Paul, to learn the faith, to learn about Christ, to learn the path of the righteous life."

One of the most important aspects of St. Paul's missionary impact was his universal focus. At the jubilee's opening liturgy, Patriarch Bartholomew explained that Orthodox churches were also participating in the Year of St. Paul because of his immense influence on the churches of the East. He was a man who bridged the Greek and Roman cultures, the patriarch said.

And as Pope Benedict explained, St. Paul, who was born a Jew, tried to overcome the distinctions between Jews and Gentiles, slaves and free, men and women by teaching that "all of you are one in Jesus Christ." In a real sense, he anticipated the church's multicultural mission.

The apostle's evangelizing excursions were possible because of the Roman Empire's political stability at the time, the pope noted. In his more than 10,000 miles of missionary journeys, St. Paul traveled through the vast territories safely because of the Romans' extensive network of roads.

Exploring St. Paul's impact

The relevance of St. Paul to the contemporary globalized culture was studied in conferences and symposiums during the jubilee year. The St. Paul's Colloquium in Rome, a meeting of Catholic and Protestant scholars, examined how the apostle consistently stripped away cultural baggage and drove his audiences back to the question of how the Gospel radically transforms one's life.

A U.S. Scripture scholar, Father Raymond F. Collins, explained that because Catholic priests focus mainly on the life of Jesus — recounted in the Gospels of Matthew, Mark, Luke and John — they have tended to pay less attention to St. Paul's writings in their preaching. Increasingly, though, St. Paul's letters have been getting more attention from Catholic scholars and theologians.

New collections of St. Paul's letters were published in the United States and around the world during the jubilee year, and in many U.S. dioceses, pastoral programs were established to familiarize the faithful with the apostle and his impact on the church's history.

The U.S. activities included pastoral letters from bishops on St. Paul, lesson plans for catechism and adult education, Bible reflections, special liturgies, and local and international pilgrimages. Catholic newspapers like Our Sunday Visitor set up special web pages offering resources on St. Paul. Several dioceses, including the Archdiocese of Boston, offered online commentaries on selected Scriptural passages.

Some bishops were particularly creative. In suggesting "Ten Ways to Celebrate the Year of St. Paul," Bishop Michael Saltarelli of Wilmington, Delaware, even proposed an Internet tour of Pauline paintings available at the JesusWalk website, and suggested modern movies with a connection to St. Paul's message.

Across the U.S. Catholic world, lectures and meetings took up the theme of St. Paul. Speaking in the Rockville Centre Diocese in New York at the annual Cardinal Anthony Bevilacqua lecture, Archbishop Demetrios, head of the Greek Orthodox Church in the United States and a Pauline scholar, pointed out that St. Paul is quoted not just in church circles but throughout society: "Fight the good fight," "labor of love," "the wages of sin" and "suffer fools gladly" are all common Pauline expressions.

At a deeper level, Archbishop Demetrios said, the apostle's legacy was based on his preaching that Christ crucified represents "the medicine of first resort for every spiritual weakness," and thus there can be "no possibility of compromise."

Around the world, the rediscovery of St. Paul found many forms. A special hymn for the jubilee was created in Rome. In Turkey, which St. Paul crisscrossed three times, liturgies and a national pilgrimage were organized for the minority Christian community. In Damascus, Syria, the ancient street that led to St. Paul's hiding place after his conversion was restored to its original condition. In Australia, Archbishop Mark Coleridge made available for download a series of mp3 audio files, video lectures and DVDs featuring the life and writings of St. Paul. In China, bishops issued pastoral letters on St. Paul and evangelization, while in Morocco church leaders organized group meetings for prayer and discussion.

A Pauline pilgrim's path

Pilgrims coming to Rome — and there were many — found themselves with an itinerary of nine sites linked to the life of St. Paul, including two ancient churches built upon houses where the apostle stayed, the Mamertine Prison where he was incarcerated by the Roman authorities, and the Abbey of the Three Fountains where he was beheaded on the order of the Emperor Nero. According to legend, his severed head rebounded and struck the earth in three different places from which fountains sprang forth.

A plenary indulgence, the remission of temporal punishment due to sin, was offered for pilgrims who came to Rome and crossed the threshold of the "Pauline Doors," prayed at the tomb of St. Paul, confessed their sins, received the Eucharist and offered prayers for the pope's intentions. The indulgence was also offered to Catholics participating in local events marking the jubilee year.

As the Year of St. Paul progressed, Pope Benedict made the apostle the focus of many of his public speeches and sermons, finding a "St. Paul angle" in his talks to bishops, religious orders, university students and his own Roman Curia. The pope had much to draw upon: St. Paul's 14 letters constitute about half of the New Testament.

Visiting Paris in 2008, the pope recalled St. Paul's preaching against idolatry and greed, and asked whether it wasn't relevant today: "Have not money, the thirst for possessions, for power and even knowledge, diverted man from his true identity?"

When the pope wrote his annual message for the World Day for Migrants and Refugees, he found food for thought in the writings of St. Paul, a "migrant by vocation" and an ambassador-at-large for Christ.

The pope frequently cited the apostle's ability to evangelize in cultures that are new to Christianity. For example, he told Asian bishops that, like St. Paul, they need to find ways to present the Gospel in ways that resonate with the traditional spiritual wisdom of their continent.

Unity and credibility

Above all, the pope highlighted St. Paul's missionary courage. He told a group of newly appointed bishops to imitate St. Paul's persistence in the face of personal mistreatment and dangers, and to remember the words of his letter to his evangelizing companion Timothy: "Bear your share of hardship for the Gospel with the strength that comes from God."

Pope Benedict's idea was to make the Year of St. Paul more than a history class. He applied the saint's lessons to modern life, especially when it came to rivalries and controversies within the church community.

In early 2009, at the peak of debate over several of his own decisions in the church, the pope quoted St. Paul's admonition to Galatian Christians not to "go on biting and devouring one another." The pope said St. Paul understood that church unity was the primary requisite for a credible witness of the Gospel in the world, and that without it, evangelization simply won't take hold.

That was the theme of one of the major Pauline year events in Rome, the ecumenical vespers service on January 25, 2009, the feast of the conversion of St. Paul. The liturgy marked the close of the Week of Prayer for Christian Unity, and Pope Benedict was once again joined by Orthodox, Protestant and Anglican representatives in the Basilica of St. Paul's Outside the Walls.

In his homily, the pope said the same Lord who called St. Paul to conversion addresses members of his church today, calling each one by name and asking: Why have you divided me? Why have you injured the unity of my body? St. Paul's message, he said, is that without internal unity, Christians cannot bring peace and reconciliation to the ruptured societies across the globe.

Pope Benedict is to return to the same basilica on June 29, 2009, to close the Year of St. Paul, thus ending the 2,000th birthday celebration for the apostle whose evangelizing energy helped move the church into the world.

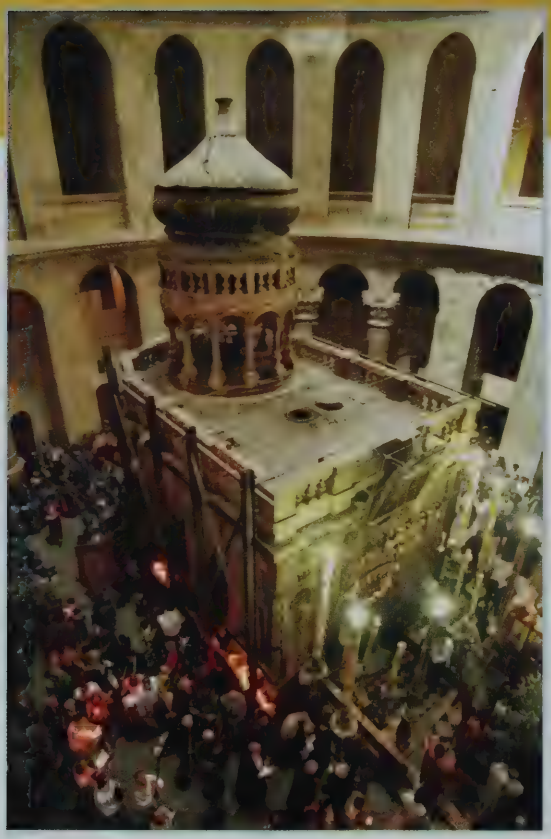
Papal Visits to the Holy Land

By Judith Sudilovsky



The message of peace and reconciliation Pope Benedict XVI will bring with him on his May pilgrimage to the Holy Land is a harbinger of hope for Palestinians and Israelis of all religions in trying times. There are high expectations for the visit including a renewal of the peace talks, an economic boost to the area with the anticipated influx of pilgrims, and a spiritual re-strengthening of the local faithful.

The biblical Holy Land—which encompasses what is today the Palestinian Territories, Israel and part of Jordan—holds deep religious significance for Christians, Muslims and Jews. Some of the holy cites such as Jerusalem, Bethlehem, and Hebron are venerated by all three faiths. For Christians, Jerusalem is the site of Jesus' crucifixion and resurrection. For Muslims it is considered the third holiest city after Mecca and Medina in Saudi Arabia since it is believed to be the site where the Prophet Mohammed ascended into the heavens. Jews consider Jerusalem sacred as their biblical capital and the location of their temple.

Despite the historic and religious significance of the area for Christianity, the Christian population there is rather small. Estimates vary as to the numbers of Christians living in the Holy Land today but most statistics indicate there are about 90,000 Christians in the Palestinian Territories including Gaza and the West Bank, and some 190,000 in Israel. Christians make up about two percent of the population in both areas. In Jordan estimates of the Christian population vary more widely, ranging from three to seven percent of the population which would constitute some 400,000 Christians living in Jordan.

The gold-covered Dome of the Rock at the Temple Mount complex is seen in this overview of Jerusalem from the Mount of Olives April 6. Though most of the Christians in Israel are Arab, many Christians have arrived from the former Soviet Union with their Jewish spouses during a wave of immigration in the 1990's, creating a new sort of non-Arab Christian community in Israel.

The Pope's Purpose

While Pope Benedict's May 8-15 pilgrimage will combine both spiritual and secular aspects, the pilgrimage's focus is mainly a pastoral one, said the Vatican representative to the Holy Land. "(The pope's intention) is to express his solidarity and closeness to the people of Israel and of Palestine and through them to all the peoples of this region," said Papal Nuncio Archbishop Antonio Franco at a March 10 news conference announcing the pope's pilgrimage.

"There will be no discussions on one topic or another. There will be courtesy visits and courtesy discussions. (Perhaps) the Holy Father will say some words which can have political implications but the visit is not political. The visit is religious," he emphasized.

Israeli Foreign Ministry Spokesman Yigal Palmor said the mere fact of the pope's presence in the Holy Land is significant. "His message of peace and outreach is not only to the Christians here but a message to members of all faiths," said Palmor.

The pope's pilgrimage comes towards the end of the Jubilee Year of St. Paul declared by the pope in June 2008 to celebrate the 2000th year of the Evangelist's birth. For the most part, the pontiff will follow in the footsteps of his predecessor Pope John Paul II's first papal visit to the Holy Land. Pope Benedict XVI's itinerary will include visits to holy sites as well as meetings with religious and state leaders in Jordan, Israel and the Palestinian Territories.

Pope Paul VI was the first pope to visit the Holy Land in 1964, but his was only a brief 11-hour visit at a time when the Vatican had no official relations with either the Israelis or the Palestinians.

"Each visit reflects a different stage in the historical process," said Rabbi David Rosen, director of the American Jewish Committee's Department for Interreligious Affairs. "Pope Benedict comes at a time where we have been (the) beneficiaries of John Paul II's papacy and when (Catholic-Jewish) relations have never been closer..."

Though no one expects any specific statements from the pope, his presence will affirm the deep bond between the Church and Jewish people and his "deep desire for peace in the Holy Land," said Rabbi Rosen.

Catholic Palestinian parliamentarian Bernard Sabella said Palestinians were eager to welcome the pope but there was a desire that the pope would "touch the pain of Palestinian Christians and Muslims."

First and foremost, however, said Tantur Ecumenical Institute rector Father Michael McGarry, C.S.P., is to remember that the pope is coming to the Holy Land on a personal pilgrimage, despite any attempts by the media to put a different spin on the visit. "We should allow the person who is making the pilgrimage to define it," said Father McGarry.

The Pope's Pilgrimage

On the first leg of his pilgrimage to the Holy Land the pope will visit Mt. Nebo, one of the most important Christian sites in Jordan and a traditional site for Christian pilgrimage. From there, according to the Old Testament, Moses was permitted only to view the Promised Land. According to Jewish and Christian tradition this is also Moses' burial site, although the actual location of his grave is unknown.

Remains of a Byzantine church and monastery were uncovered here in 1933 by the Franciscan fathers who own the site and on his pilgrimage in 2000, Pope John Paul II planted an olive tree next to the chapel as a symbol of peace.

While in Jordan, the pope will visit a baptismal site recently restored on the banks of the Jordan River. Numerous Byzantine and Roman-era archaeological finds have been uncovered there including baptismal pools, churches and monasteries. Almost within arm's reach across the river, is an Israeli baptismal site which is also undergoing a facelift in anticipation of the pope's visit. Both claim to be the site of the New Testament Bethany, where John the Baptist is believed to have baptized Jesus. The pope will bless two new churches at the Jordanian baptismal site, one Roman Catholic and the other Melkite.

Arriving in Jerusalem on May 10, the pope will have the opportunity for a private moment of prayer at the Cenacle in the Old City which is venerated by both Jews and Christians. Jews believe the ground floor of the structure marks the site of King David's tomb while Christian tradition holds that the second floor is the site of the upper room, where Jesus held the Last Supper with his disciples and introduced the Eucharist. It is also the site where Christians believe the Holy Spirit descended upon the disciples on Pentecost.

The pope will have another private visit at the Church of the Holy Sepulcher in Jerusalem towards the end of his pilgrimage. Believed by Christians to be the site of Jesus' crucifixion and resurrection, the original church was built in the fourth century by Roman Emperor Constantine. Having undergone many transformations since then, the cavernous church today is shared by the Greek Orthodox Church, the Roman Catholic Church — represented by the Franciscan Custody of the Holy Land, the Armenian Church, the Coptic Church, the Syrian Orthodox Church and the Ethiopian Orthodox Church.

The pope will also pay respects to two religious sites of Muslim and Jewish importance in Jerusalem.

At the Dome of the Rock he will be accompanied by the Grand Mufti of Jerusalem. While for Muslims this is the spot where the ascension of the Prophet Mohammed took place, for Jews this is the site of their temple. According to Dominican Father Jerome Murphy O'Connor, professor of the New Testament at the French Biblical and Archaeological School of Jerusalem, the rock now enshrined inside the Dome of the Rock is likely to have been the foundation of either the Herodian temple's Holy of Holies, the innermost part of the temple building, or the altar of sacrifice.

Pope Benedict XVI will also visit the nearby Western Wall, the only intact remnant of the Jewish Temple Mount, which today stands below the Haram el-Sharif esplanade of Dome of the Rock. This was once the retaining wall of the Jewish Temple Mount and is today considered Judaism's holiest site.

While in Israel, the pope will hold his main public mass on Mount Precipice, just outside of Nazareth—Israel's largest Arab city and the place where Jesus spent the majority of his life. According to Scripture an angry mob attempted to throw him off the cliff (Luke 4:16-30) at Mount Precipice.

The pope will also hold a large public mass in Bethlehem in Nativity Square, just outside the fourth century Church of the Nativity which Christian tradition holds marks the birthplace of Jesus. The same Christian denominations with traditional rights in the Church of the Holy Sepulcher administer the Church of the Nativity. Here too, the Roman Catholic Church is represented by the Franciscan Custody of the Holy Land which maintains the separate adjacent chapel of St. Catherine, where Midnight Mass is broadcast around the world on Christmas Eve.

With the papal visit to the Holy Land encompassing all the inhabitants of the land, Maronite Archbishop Paul Nabil Sayah of Haifa said at the March press conference, Pope Benedict XVI wants to nevertheless send the message that the "Christian presence in this part of the world and the Holy Land in particular is of vital importance to the Holy Father as a witness" to the universal church.

On This Rock
Architecture of the Vatican

By John Thavis

The dome of St. Peter's: for most people, it's the most recognizable symbol of the Vatican. And in many ways, the cupola, which took the genius of Michelangelo and other Renaissance artists to design and construct over a 30-year period, represents the pinnacle of architectural achievement in Rome.

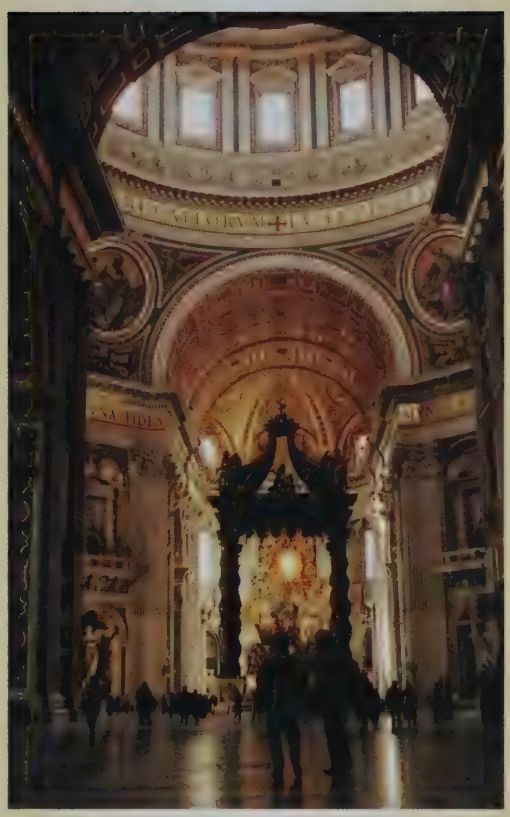
But the dome only begins to tell the story of the Vatican's architectural wonders. Vatican City, in fact, is a 109-acre landscape of arches and towers, trompe l'oeil perspectives and frescoed hallways, chapels and niches, fountains and friezes. You could call it an open-air museum, but that makes it sound frozen in time. Instead, this centuries-old architecture is living, breathing and fully functioning today.

The Vatican is no Disneyland, with fantasy turrets and crenellations. From the pope's first palace to the modernistic audience hall, structures were designed and built for a purpose.

"The Vatican doesn't do retro. Every thing they built was the newest, latest thing for its day," Elizabeth Lev, an art historian in Rome, tells her tour groups when leading them through this brick and marble topography.

A skyline takes shape

It all began with a simple tomb. The Vatican hillside, just outside the gates of the ancient Roman city, was the site of a large cemetery that became the final resting place of St. Peter, who was martyred in a nearby racetrack. A cult dedicated to the memory of the first pope took hold, and in the early 4th century the Emperor Constantine built his first Basilica of St. Peter above the grave.



During the medieval decline of Rome and frequent barbarian invasions, popes protected the basilica and in the 800s Pope Leo IV began enclosing the future Vatican City inside thick walls. The transfer of the papacy to Avignon in 1309 left the Vatican Hill unattended for 70 years, and St. Peter's was abandoned to the elements and the occasional cows that grazed in its courtyard.

When the popes returned, the first order of business was to repair the church. The second was to build the pope a place to live — until then, pontiffs had resided at the Lateran Palace on the other side of Rome. Given the papacy's limited resources, however, both projects would take time.

An early version of the Apostolic Palace, which would become the home of the popes, had been constructed by Pope Nicholas III in the late 1200s. In the mid-1400s, Pope Nicholas V began an extreme makeover, adding a round tower that today houses the Vatican bank. The new palace was connected via a covered passageway to the fortified Castel Sant'Angelo on the Tiber River — an escape route that would be used several times by popes fleeing foreign invasions.

Gradually, the jumbled Vatican skyline took shape. The Sistine Chapel, just to the north of St. Peter's, was commissioned by Pope Sixtus IV and built to the dimensions of Solomon's Temple in Jerusalem. It was completed in 1481, and nearly 30 years later, an artist named Michelangelo would begin frescoing its ceiling.

Sixtus IV also built the first Vatican Library, four rooms that soon became too small for the popes' growing collection of manuscripts. Pope Innocent VIII built a house on a hillside behind the Apostolic Palace, called the Belvedere for its lovely views; it was the prototypal Renaissance country villa. Towers and courtyards, along with a Swiss Guard residence, were added to what was slowly becoming a small city beneath the papal palace.

Visitors tour St. Peter's Basilica in this 2005 photo. At center is the baldacchino designed by Gian Lorenzo Bernini. The structure rises to 95 feet beneath the basilica's main dome and marks the main altar and the grave of St. Peter.

Pope Julius II, the same pontiff who insisted that Michelangelo paint the Sistine ceiling, ordered another great project: a three-story loggia that stretched from the Apostolic Palace to the Belvedere. Today, the twin frescoed corridors form the main display areas of the Vatican Museums.

Finally, Pope Sixtus V in the late 1500s decided to build a whole new Apostolic Palace abutting St. Peter's Square, in part to house the Vatican's expanded Roman Curia and diplomatic staff. The palace, designed by architect Domenico Fontana, is where popes reside today and from which, every Sunday, they pray the Angelus and bless the crowd below.

A new basilica

Serious work on St. Peter's Basilica began under Pope Julius II, who gathered the resources and the will to carry out the project. He hired famed architect Donato Bramante and gave him permission to virtually tear down the old basilica and build a new one. Bramante carried through with gusto, destroying mosaics, frescoes, statues and even relics with such abandon that he earned the nickname, Maestro Ruinante or "Master Wrecker."

Bramante's plan for the basilica was a Greek cross, with all four arms of equal length. The cornerstone was laid in 1506 and the building was slowly beginning to take shape when Pope Julius died in 1513, and Bramante the following year. For the next 33 years, a series of architects took turns at completing the basilica, including the Florentine Antonio da Sangallo, who decided to lengthen the nave and turn the Greek cross plan into a Latin cross.

Sangallo died in 1546 with little construction accomplished, and Pope Paul III turned to Michelangelo, then 72 years old, who had little or no architectural experience. He simplified Sangallo's design and returned to the Greek cross plan, giving the interior much-needed lighting by adding windows.

When Michelangelo died 18 years later, much of the exterior was finished and the drum of the dome was nearing completion. But the next chief architect, Giacomo della Porta, had his own ideas. For one thing, he gave the dome a more elongated look instead of the squat hemisphere that Michelangelo apparently had in mind.

The work was far from completed when della Porta died in 1602. Under the new architect, Carlo Maderno, the remnants of the old basilica were torn down and the nave once again extended. In the end, the Latin cross triumphed, in part because of concern that the smaller Greek cross design was not big enough for major papal processions and liturgies.

Maderno finished the nave, the vestibule and, finally, the façade, which has been much criticized for being too busy and inelegant. But the new basilica was finally completed, and was inaugurated in 1626.

A new architect would now leave his mark on the church and the square: Gian Lorenzo Bernini, who in 1633 completed work on a baroque baldacchino or canopy above the basilica's main altar. From 1656-66 he completed one of his greatest works, the semicircular colonnade that borders St. Peter's Square, ringed with statues that stand above a forest of columns. With this last grand building project, the modern Vatican had largely taken shape.

A space that embraces

What's wonderful is that this rich architectural history is not hidden away behind Vatican City walls. Most of it can be seen and experienced by a casual visitor to St. Peter's Square, the Basilica and the Vatican Museums.

It is Bernini's space that first welcomes modern visitors to the Vatican, as they step into the square. It's not a "square," of course, but an oval. The twin arms of the colonnade are meant to embrace the crowds (and metaphorically the world) and can accommodate more than 100,000 people during religious ceremonies. On other days, this traffic-less space provides an unusual sense of calm in the middle of Rome.

The colonnades have four rows of Doric columns, 284 in all, forming three covered walkways that have borne the footsteps of countless cardinals, Vatican functionaries and tourists. Viewed from two points near the center of the square, the columns align perfectly in a tribute to the architectural precision of Bernini and his workshop. Looking down on visitors from above the colonnade are more than 100 statues of saints, martyrs and popes.

The focal point of the square is the Egyptian obelisk, which, like the bronze fountains to each side, were already in place when Bernini began his work. The obelisk once adorned the middle of Nero's circus nearby — the presumed site of St. Peter's crucifixion. Pope Sixtus V had it moved here in 1586, a massive engineering operation that required a small army of workers, horses and cranes.

As the visitor draws near to the church, the dome does a disappearing act, an effect of the lengthened nave. On either side of the façade, which is the size of a soccer field, stand squat towers. They were meant to be taller, but Bernini — to his everlasting embarrassment — miscalculated the stress and the foundations began to cede during construction.

At the end of the right colonnade, where the Apostolic Palace complex joins the church, an upward glance reveals the Bronze Door. It's the archetypal Vatican entryway, and a Swiss Guard stands sentry in his distinctive striped uniform. Beyond the door is a corridor leading to the Scala Regia or "Royal Staircase" that Bernini restored with illusionist baroque touches.

Architecture on a giant scale

The climb up the steps to St. Peter's Basilica is sometimes compared to a spiritual ascent. Inside the vestibule, the central bronze doors were salvaged from the old St. Peter's and decorated by the Renaissance sculptor Filarete with biblical reliefs and an intricate frieze of animal and plant life. Stepping inside the basilica, one enters a magnificent and vast space bounded above by Bramante's gilded coffered ceiling and below by Bernini's marble floor, and leading visually to the brightness of the altar area beneath the dome.

Bernini's colossal altar canopy, cast with bronze taken from the roof of the Pantheon, is a baroque masterpiece that imitates, on a giant scale, the canopies used to carry statues and relics during popular processions. Its soaring twisted columns are decorated with olive and bay branches, and are surmounted by angels.

In front of the altar, the sunken confessio leads down to the area where St. Peter's tomb was discovered during excavations carried out in the mid-20th century. The lower level of St. Peter's, which holds the tombs of many popes, is known as the Vatican Grottoes and is open daily; below that, the excavated Roman cemetery can be visited by appointment.

From the depths to the heights, an elevator takes visitors to the inside of the dome, where a dizzying view reveals the basilica's vast scale. A passage to the outdoor roof of the basilica offers a unique panorama of Rome and a close-up look at St. Peter's smaller domes and statues. A steep stairway leads upward to the lantern at the pinnacle of the dome, with a bird's-eye view of Vatican City.

A walk through time

The Vatican Museums represent the other major architectural gateway to Vatican City. It's an amalgamation of styles, beginning with an ingenious modern staircase designed by Giuseppe Momo in 1932, which features two intertwined spiral ramps — one leading up, one leading down.

Above the entrance, the Belvedere villa built by Pope Innocent VIII now houses an amazing collection of Greek and Roman sculpture assembled by Renaissance popes. Proceeding down the long museum corridors, the visitor encounters the original chambers of the Vatican Library, including the frescoed reading room.

At the southern end of the corridors lie a series of rooms that form the heart of the Vatican's early architecture. The tiny Chapel of Nicholas V, with its lovely frescoes by Fra Angelico, is part of the Tower of Innocent III, which was built in the early 1200s.

The Borgia Apartment, which houses modern art today, occupies the entire first floor of the original papal palace begun in the late 13th century. Its small windows overlook the Courtyard of the Parrots, where the atmosphere is gloomy and fortress-like.

The Raphael Rooms are situated in the more airy second floor of the early papal palace, where Pope Julius II and his successors lived in the 16th century. Standing before Raphael's stunning frescoes, it's easy to forget that these paintings were simply the decorative backdrop for daily life in the papal living room, dining room and bedroom.

A narrow passageway leads to the Sistine Chapel, where Michelangelo spent four years covering the barrel-vaulted ceiling with frescoes depicting figures and scenes from Old and New Testaments. The ceiling is as much an architectural composition as a pictorial one. Michelangelo, in fact, painted cross-ribs and cornices to divide the vast space into a series of "frames" that hold his pictures.

Like so many of the places in the Vatican, the Sistine Chapel doubles today as a tourist attraction and an important liturgical setting. Its beauty emerges most clearly during papal Masses celebrated here a few times a year or, more dramatically, when the world's cardinals assemble to elect a new pope in a conclave.

On the other side of St. Peter's Basilica looms one of the Vatican's most modern buildings, the Paul VI Audience Hall, where the pope conducts his weekly general audience when the weather is too hot, cold or rainy to hold it in St. Peter's Square.

This distinctive building, with a curved roof that was recently covered with solar panels, was designed by the Italian architect Pier Luigi Nervi and completed in 1971. Such a modern edifice, constructed of reinforced concrete, may seem odd plunked in the shadow of St. Peter's, but it met a real need, and today it's one of the most-used buildings in Vatican City.

The Audience Hall stands about 100 feet from where it all began. Across the space that once accommodated the circus of Nero and Caligula — where St. Peter was martyred — lies the Vatican Hill cemetery. Here, early Christians laid St. Peter's body in the ground, and marked the site with a makeshift tomb: the seed of 20 centuries of architectural development.

WORLD YOUTH DAY

BY CINDY WOODEN

The Book of the Gospels is carried at the opening Mass of World Youth Day in Sydney, Australia, July 15. Sydney Cardinal George Pell celebrated the Mass before an estimated 140,000 people. (CNS photo/Paul Haring) (July 15, 2008)

The local and international celebrations of World Youth Day are not simply an opportunity for the Catholic Church to energize its young people and guarantee a future for the church; World Youth Day is a time to celebrate the fact that young people are an essential part of the church's present.

At the closing Mass for World Youth Day 2008 in Sydney, Australia, Pope Benedict XVI told young people: The church "needs your faith, your idealism and your generosity, so that she can always be young in the Spirit!"

"Each and every Christian has received a gift meant for building up the Body of Christ," he said. "The Church especially needs the gifts of young people, all young people. She needs to grow in the power of the Spirit who even now gives joy to your youth and inspires you to serve the Lord with gladness. Open your hearts to that power!"

Six months later, when reviewing the 2008 gathering, which brought some 200,000 young Catholics to Sydney, Pope Benedict asked: "What, then, really happens at a World Youth Day? What are the forces at play? Popular analyses tend to view these days as a variant of contemporary youth culture, a sort of rock festival in an ecclesial key, with the pope as its main attraction." But the "Catholic Woodstock" label misses what is at the heart of the spiritual preparations, the fundraising and the traveling, he said; it misses the biggest draw of all, which is young people coming together to deepen their relationship with Christ and with the church.

"Thus, the pope is not the star around which everything revolves. He is completely and solely a vicar," Pope Benedict said. The closing Mass is the center of the event because "Christ is present. He comes into our midst. The heavens are rent and the earth is filled with light. This is what makes life joyful and free, uniting people with one another in a joy that cannot be compared to the ecstasy of a rock festival."

Pope John Paul II, who started World Youth Day in 1986, said the gatherings were not something the church organized for young people, but for the whole church as a reminder that it is called to be young at heart, enthusiastic and filled with hope for the future. "In young people the church sees herself and her mission to humankind: with them she faces the challenges of the future, aware that all humanity needs to be rejuvenated in spirit," Pope John Paul said in a message to participants in a 1996 meeting held to review the first 10 years of World Youth Days.

The World Youth Day pilgrimage to different cities on different continents, he said, "builds bridges of brotherhood and hope between continents, peoples and cultures."

At the end of the United Nations' International Youth Year in 1985, Pope John Paul accepted the suggestion of young Catholics to dedicate an annual day to celebrating their unique gifts and helping them face the challenges of preparing for adulthood. The World Youth Day celebrations take place either on a diocesan level — usually on Palm Sunday — or on an international level on a day and in a city designated by the pope.

At the end of World Youth Day 2008 in Sydney, Pope Benedict announced that the next international gathering would take place in Madrid in 2011.

Releasing his message for the 2009 celebration, the pope provided young people with the list of themes for reflection up to and including the Madrid gathering.

The theme for 2009 was: "We have set our hope on the living God." For 2010, young people and their bishops were asked to focus on the question the rich young man puts to Jesus in the Gospel of St. Mark: "Good Teacher, what must I do to inherit eternal life?" And the Madrid gathering will revolve around a verse from the Letter of St. Paul to the Colossians: "Rooted and built up in Jesus Christ, firm in the faith."

The international gatherings may bring together millions of people like the celebration in Manila in the Philippines in 1995 or Rome in 2000. Or they may draw tens of thousands as in Denver, Colorado in 1993 or Toronto in 2002. But they share a structure that goes beyond bringing young people together to sing, pray and form friendships.

Cardinals and bishops from around the world lead hundreds of catechetical sessions for the young people each day. While the formal talks are focused on the World Youth Day theme, most of the lessons end with a long question-and-answer session giving the youth a rare opportunity to ask church leaders anything they want.

During the 2002 celebration, Pope John Paul established a new World Youth Day tradition of inviting a dozen young people to lunch. Pope Benedict has continued the practice of hosting the lunch with a young man and a young woman representing each continent.

The 12 young adults not only shared lunch with Pope Benedict in Sydney but also stories about their lives and their countries. They brought him gifts, including handicrafts from their home countries and CDs of classical music.

Armando Cervantes, the then 27-year-old director of youth and young adult ministry for the Diocese of Orange in California, presented the pope with a classic Mickey Mouse hat from the top tourist destination in his diocese — Disneyland. Cervantes, chosen to represent North America at the papal table, said he managed to eat the meal pretty much without looking at it. "I kept looking up to make sure it was all real and that he (the pope) hadn't disappeared," he said.

At every World Youth Day and at each venue, chairs are scattered in quiet corners where priests wait — and usually not for long — for a young person wanting to receive the Sacrament of Reconciliation.

On the Friday of World Youth Day, the host country organizes a prayer service centered around the Stations of the Cross. They have ranged from simple presentations in a park to elaborately staged, professional reenactments through the city streets.

On Saturday the youth, whether they have traveled thousands of miles or live in the host city, grab their sleeping bags, put on their hiking shoes and set off on a walking pilgrimage. At the end of the walk, they gather with the pope for a nighttime prayer vigil in preparation for the Mass concluding World Youth Day.

While many of the young people are tired — and a bit grungy from spending the night outdoors — the pope always leaves them with something to look forward to: the announcement of the city that will host the next international World Youth Day. They go home with dozens, maybe even hundreds, of e-mail addresses and Facebook "friends" to keep in touch with until the next World Youth Day. Many of them also leave with calling cards, brochures and the promises of prayer from priests and religious they have met.

Throughout the World Youth Day celebrations, close to 100 religious orders, bishops' conferences or dioceses, lay movements and marriage support programs set up booths at a "Vocations Fair." Staffed by young members of the orders or movements, the booths offer World Youth Day participants information about the huge variety of ways to live the Christian vocation. While it may look like a typical convention marketplace — with brochures and free trinkets — the fair provides a place for young people thinking about their futures to get advice, a listening ear and prayerful support.

At the Missionaries of Charity booth in Sydney, Sister Milada ran one of the busiest booths, but, she said, "Without reflection and prayer a vocations expo is nothing. But it is effective in the context of World Youth Day with its prayer, the witness of young religious, the catechesis and the testimonies."

Focused on the gift of the Holy Spirit, the Sydney gathering led the pope and the young people to narrow in on two very practical aspects of modern life: discovering one's vocation in life and protecting the environment. "Being 'given to drink' of the Spirit means being refreshed by the beauty of the Lord's plan for us and for the world, and becoming in turn a source of spiritual refreshment for others," the pope told the young people. "Being 'sealed with the Spirit' (by the sacrament of Confirmation) means not being afraid to stand up for Christ, letting the truth of the Gospel permeate the way we see, think and act, as we work for the triumph of the civilization of love."

The Holy Spirit, sent to Christ's disciples after his resurrection and ascension, is the same Spirit that hovered over the waters at the dawn of creation and gave the breath of life to all that lives, Pope Benedict said.

Arriving in Sydney, the pope told the young people what he saw from the air as he flew 21 hours from Rome: "The sparkle of the Mediterranean, the grandeur of the north African desert, the lushness of Asia's forestation, the vastness of the Pacific Ocean, the horizon upon which the sun rose and set, and the majestic splendor of Australia's natural beauty ... these all evoke a profound sense of awe. It is as though one catches glimpses of the Genesis creation story — light and darkness, the sun and the moon, the waters, the earth and living creatures; all of which are 'good' in God's eyes."

And, yet, he told them, "there are also scars which mark the surface of our earth: erosion, deforestation, the squandering of the world's mineral and ocean resources in order to fuel an insatiable consumption." Worst of all, the pope said, the "crown of God's creation" — human beings — are threatened by abortion and euthanasia, drug and alcohol abuse, physical and sexual exploitation and an increasing lack of values and ethics. "God's creation is one and it is good," he told the young people. "The concerns for nonviolence, sustainable development, justice and peace, and care for our environment are of vital importance for humanity. They cannot, however, be understood apart from a profound reflection upon the innate dignity of every human life from conception to natural death: a dignity conferred by God himself and thus inviolable."

"Our world has grown weary of greed, exploitation and division, of the tedium of false idols and piecemeal responses, and the pain of false promises. Our hearts and minds are yearning for a vision of life where love endures, where gifts are shared, where unity is built, where freedom finds meaning in truth, and where identity is found in respectful communion. This is the work of the Holy Spirit! This is the hope held out by the Gospel of Jesus Christ. It is to bear witness to this reality that you were created anew at baptism and strengthened through the gifts of the Spirit at confirmation," he told them.

World Youth Days, Pope Benedict said at the closing Mass, are occasions to see "the Church for what she truly is: the Body of Christ, a living community of love, embracing people of every race, nation and tongue, of every time and place, in the unity born of our faith in the Risen Lord."

He left Sydney telling them, "Empowered by the Spirit, and drawing upon faith's rich vision, a new generation of Christians is being called to help build a world in which God's gift of life is welcomed, respected and cherished — not rejected, feared as a threat and destroyed. A new age in which love is not greedy or self-seeking, but pure, faithful and genuinely free, open to others, respectful of their dignity, seeking their good, radiating joy and beauty."

Underlining the fact that they are the church's present as well as its future, the pope addressed them as "dear young friends" and told them, "The Lord is asking you to be prophets of this new age, messengers of his love, drawing people to the Father and building a future of hope for all humanity."

Trends in Catholic Higher Education

Introduction

From the founding of Georgetown in 1797 until today, Catholic colleges and universities have understood and lived-out their mission to serve students, the larger society, and the Church in a variety of ways. In order to survive in the higher education marketplace, Catholic institutions have had to be both nimble and astute in responding to cultural realities in American society and to developments within the Catholic Church, as well. Not all of the hundreds of Catholic colleges founded in the United States have survived. But those that have are able to adapt and adjust to significant cultural changes, while still claiming their Catholic character and religious purpose.

After a long period of establishment and stabilization, the big expansionary years for Catholic higher education occurred during the years following World War II. This era ushered in three phases of what might be termed the modern period in American higher education. During this first phase (1945 until 1967), Catholic colleges expanded their programs, increased the number of students substantially, and built up their campuses. As this era came to a close in 1967, the first lay boards of trustees began operating at Webster College, the University of St. Louis, and the University of Notre Dame. In that same year the Land O' Lakes Statement made clear that Catholic higher education in the United States would operate in a context of substantial academic freedom.

Phase II of the modern development of Catholic colleges and universities (1967 until 1990) was shaped from within the Church by Vatican Council II and from without by the social upheaval of the 1960s. Developments at this time not only led to further increases in enrollments, but also to changes that challenged the Catholic identity of the institutions. The adjustments made by founding congregations, administrators, and boards during this second phase made an impact on the structure and Catholic identity of many Catholic institutions and set off ripple effects still felt today.

The third of phases of modern development (1990 until the present) began with Pope John Paul II's apostolic exhortation Ex Corde Ecclesiae and his call for specific norms that would help define how colleges and universities could live out the document's vivid ideal for Catholic higher education.

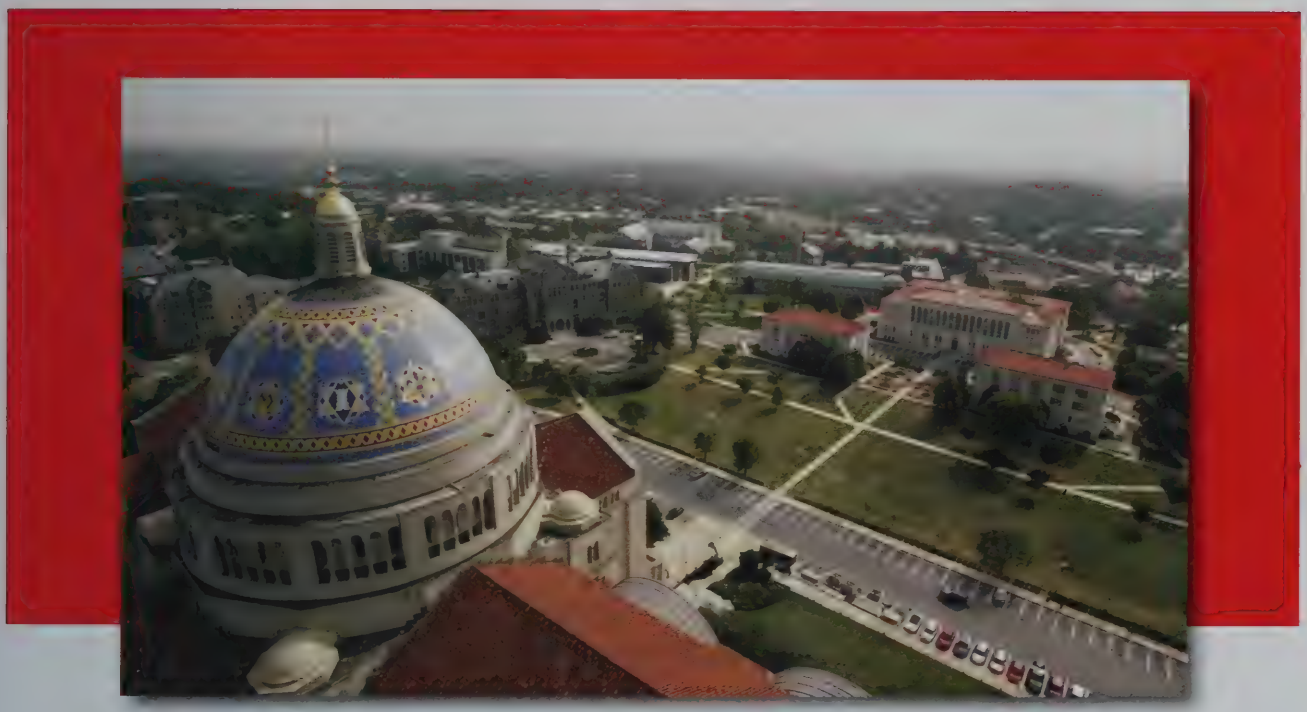
The Modern Context

Even in this current phase, Catholic institutions of higher education continue to adjust to three major ecclesial and secular trends which first appeared over forty years ago: fewer Catholic students among the growing numbers of students on campus; fewer priests, nuns, and brothers on campus; and higher student expectations with respect to academic, athletic, and residential facilities and programs.

Beginning in the 1960s, Catholics fully entered the mainstream of American life. Once they did, nonsectarian colleges and universities became more interested in tapping the "Catholic student market" and Catholic students and their parents responded positively to these new options.

At the same time, an unprecedented contraction in the ranks of nuns, priests, and brothers resulted in the disappearance of this visible witness community at all Catholic colleges and universities. Although even at the high-water mark, men and women religious never constituted more than forty percent of the faculty, they were a significant presence. Well trained in the faith and in their academic disciplines, their Catholic lay colleagues deferred to their leadership in religious matters on campus.

Parents and students and the changing culture of American higher education fueled the third major trend – unrelenting competition. Elite national institutions competed with one another in terms of hiring high-profile faculty members, adding increasingly sophisticated technology, building more appealing residential facilities, and developing more ambitious sports programs and athletic facilities. Second tier institutions operating regionally or locally also tried to attract well-published faculty members, build more residence halls and recreational facilities for the students, and expand their sports programs. These smaller and less financially endowed institutions felt that following-the-leaders, albeit on a small scale, was the only way to they could continue to appeal to students and their parents.



Reactions and Decisions

Administrators, boards of trustees, and faculty members at Catholic institutions were alert to these developments and in a difficult academic environment they made fairly clear decisions to compete. The larger Catholic institutions saw an opportunity to improve their standing in the general world of higher education, and many were successful in doing this. Boston College, Catholic University of America, DePaul University, Fordham University, Georgetown University, Loyola University Chicago, Marquette University, St. John's University (NY), St. Louis University, University of Notre Dame, the University of St. Thomas (MN), and Villanova University, extended their programs and in most cases also the number of students on both the graduate and the undergraduate level.

Other institutions started to be highly ranked regionally. For example, Loyola-Marymount University, Santa Clara University, St. Mary's College of California, the University of Portland, and the University of San Diego made significant strides among West Coast Schools. In Ohio, John Carroll College, the University of Dayton, and Xavier University also made important gains. In the Northeast, the College of the Holy Cross expanded somewhat the number of students, but greatly enhanced its academic reputation, as did Saint Anselm College (NH). In addition, the College of Notre Dame of Maryland, Fairfield University, Loyola College (MD), Manhattan College, Neumann College, St. Joseph's University, and the University of Scranton made their mark more regionally.

One popular strategy adopted particular, broadly-appealing components of the Catholic intellectual tradition and built on them as the focal point of institutional Catholic character and mission. Issues related to Catholic social teaching (peace and justice and voluntary assistance to the poor and disadvantaged) often became the most prominent and popular "Catholic" programs on campus. This approach was appealing to a wide variety of Catholic and non-Catholic students. Also many faculty members were committed and prepared to introduce these as classroom topics in disciplines as distinct as political science, English literature, philosophy, sociology, business, and even the hard sciences.

By hiring faculty members with excellent credentials from the best graduate programs in the country, Catholic colleges and universities accepted a trade-off. In many cases, they realized that the faculty members were lukewarm about the Catholic mission of the institution. On the other hand, their disciplinary expertise offered the opportunity to garner prestige and an enhanced reputation in academic circles that could help the institution remain competitive in the marketplace.

While all this was happening, a smaller number of Catholic institutions made distinctly different decisions. They could see how some of the large national institutions had to tone down their Catholic profile in order to become truly national. They correctly saw this as a potential threat to their enduring Catholic identity. As a result, a band of small but hardy institutions bucked the trend and decided to put their emphasis squarely on their Catholic heritage and the Catholic intellectual tradition. They decided they would teach the Catholic intellectual tradition to all their students. Franciscan University of Steubenville is the largest and best known of these institutions. In addition, such institutions as Belmont Abbey College (NC), DeSales University (PA), the University of Dallas (TX), and the University of St. Thomas (TX), put new emphasis on the Catholic mission. After 1970 a number of new "intentionally Catholic" institutions such as Christendom College (VA), Thomas Aquinas College (CA), Ave Maria University (FL), Southern Catholic College (GA), and the newest Catholic college, Wyoming Catholic College (WY), were founded. They hoped to offer a more robustly-Catholic alternative to what was available in the higher education marketplace.

Emerging Challenges

Catholic colleges and universities enrich the landscape of American higher education. Father John Jenkins, CSC, the president of the University of Notre Dame (IN) insists they do so, precisely because of their religious character. "With all respect to great academic institutions in this country, they've shed their religious tradition, and with it a certain kind of overarching moral view of education. They do great work.

Baker Liturgical Art, LLC is the proud sponsor of the 2009 special report on Catholic Education.

I don't mean to demean them. But (Catholic colleges and universities) have the opportunity to be the place that combines the highest level of reason and inquiry with living a religious faith."

It is also true that Catholic higher education in the United States today is a growth industry. In the academic year 2000-2001, 57,961 students were enrolled in undergraduate and graduate programs at Catholic colleges and universities. Today that number exceeds 900,000. In the twenty-five years between 1980 and 2005 Catholic higher education enrollment increased by 60.9% and ten new Catholic universities and colleges were founded.

As more and more students seek admission, the most important challenge for Catholic institutions will continue to be hiring. As President Jacqueline Doud of Mount St. Mary's College, (CA) points out, "One of our biggest challenges in the future will be identifying and selecting Catholic College leaders who are conversant with and committed to the rich tradition of Catholic higher education." The numbers of nuns, brothers, and priests on campuses who are knowledgeable and informed about the Catholic tradition will continue to decrease in the foreseeable future, as will the numbers of lay administrators and faculty who, as President Doud points out, "benefited from the formation they once received in religious life." As a result, Catholic colleges and universities will have to develop more successful strategies to attract dedicated Catholic lay faculty members, knowledgeable about their faith, and ready to act in loco religiosorum (in the place of the religious). A similar challenge exists in student affairs. Catholic institutions have to attract staff who can prudently structure programs which foster student appreciation of and compliance with normal Catholic teaching about what it means to be a full human person.

Echoing many Catholic college and university presidents, President Francesco Cesareo of Assumption College (MA) believes that these institutions are "at a critical turning point." His institution and others have responded by making "the enhancement and promotion of Catholic identity the number one priority in new strategic plans." As part of their efforts, a number of Catholic colleges and universities have instituted Catholic Studies programs. While it is true that these Catholic Studies programs offer truly Catholic content, they touch only a small percentage of students. Consequently, they cannot make an entire university Catholic. However, the number of these programs is likely to increase, so they will have to be coupled with other more broad-based initiatives if they are to achieve their stated goals.

Accrediting agencies across the United States press institutions to demonstrate the extent to which academic institutions reach their goals, including their religious goals. While most of the universities have many different ways to measure academic success, it is less clear how they should measure specifically Catholic goals for undergraduates. However, since all regional accrediting groups are insisting on measures for assessing a college's particular goals or mission, Catholic colleges will have to develop these metrics in the coming years.

There is another significant challenge that confronts boards of trustees of Catholic colleges and universities. Once it was customary for lay board members to defer to members of founding congregations when articulating Catholic policy and defining the way forward. That approach is no longer viable. As congregational ranks decrease and their distance from the collegiate operations increases, lay trustees must take over full and faithful religious leadership at Catholic colleges and universities. To do so effectively will require that they are well informed on Catholic issues relating to higher education and able to provide direction to university presidents.

Since the eighteenth century and under the leadership of nuns, priests, and brothers, Catholic colleges and universities have been plucky, nimble, and up to the considerable challenges that confronted them. This is a proud heritage for the American Catholic Church. It is also a rich legacy that Catholic lay people and many of their non-Catholic colleagues are anxious to develop and strengthen in the years to come.

Narrative • Norms • Benefits • Practices

Nuns are and always have been Catholic culture experts. This book describes the best practices of nuns in the United States and then applies them to modern parishes employing four basic principles – narrative, norms, benefits and practices. Applying these principles yields sensible and illuminating plans for laypeople to follow in the footsteps of the nuns.

This book offers modern, convincing reasons for Church practices and offers concrete solutions on how to attract more people to the regular practice of the Catholic faith.

The Seal of P.J. Kenedy & Sons
The Official Catholic Directory

SIGNIFICANCE:

The shield is the central part of a heraldic device, which is more commonly known as a coat of arms. If that shield is enclosed within a body of text, or other type of surrounding configuration, the device becomes know as a seal, yet it is the shield portion of the design that is the most important, and that which is described technically as the blazon. As the design is examined, it must be remembered that by heraldic tradition the design is described (blazoned) as if being done by the bearer with the shield being worn on the arm. Therefore, the terms dexter and sinister will be reversed as the design is viewed from the front.

The shield of the seal for The Official Catholic Directory has been designed to reflect the character and heritage of this publication of P.J. Kenedy & Sons.

The shield is in two major portions. The right half (sinister impalement) is composed of the blue field on which are seen a silver tree, two candles (in silver or white) in their candleholders (of gold or yellow) and an open book, edged in gold and with a red bookmark. These symbols have been used over the years as the sign of the P.J. Kenedy and Sons publishing organization. These are the traditional symbols of knowledge and learning, so appropriate to a publisher.

The other side of the shield (the dexter impalement) is composed of a silver (white) field on which is seen a red cross, throughout, and a gold eagle. These symbols, combined with the field of the sinister impalement, are represented in the color of the flag of the United States of America and the eagle, the symbol of the United States. The cross represents Christianity and all of this combines to signify that The Official Catholic Directory annually reports on the Catholic Church in the United States.

The shield is surrounded by a laurel wreath of excellence and is enclosed within the legend that states the name of the company, the name of the publication and date (1817) of its founding.

AT THE SERVICE OF SACRED ART SINCE 1891

In 1891, a young Spanish priest named Felix Granda founded a sacred art workshop in Madrid, desiring, in his words, "to make an art impregnated with the scent of Christ, saturated with memories of the past, where the Biblical spirit beats; and that this art be alive, united to the trunk of the traditions; and because it is of the past, that it correspond to the needs of the present."

118 years later, Granda Liturgical Arts continues this mission, employing hundreds of metalsmiths, carpenters, sculptors, enamellists and seamstresses to craft beautiful art for the Catholic Church. These skilled artisans are able to create everything from altars and statuary to chalices and tabernacles to vestments and altar linens. Granda Liturgical Arts also undertakes comprehensive interior design projects for new churches and chapels, and renovations that add new beauty to existing buildings.

CHAPEL OF THE SACRED HEARTS OF JESUS AND MARY

New York, NY

The architect's sensitive incorporation of many objects from the old church adds an historical, comforting resonance to this new construction. Lighting was the critical new element. Unique are twenty bronze, segmented cornice fixtures concealing a Rambusch reflector system plus a fluorescent, emergency backup with a remote testing feature. Fabrication of each 11½ foot unit took an artisan six days to form and hand finish. A dimmable uplifting luminosity bathes the worship environment unifying the new and the old.

GUIDANCE IN GIVING, INC.

Full Service Stewardship, Development & Campaign Consultants

Fundraising is not just about raising money, it is about being stewards of the faith.

As a full-service Catholic organization involved solely with developing programs for parishes, dioceses and schools, we have the experience and expertise to design a successful Stewardship-based capital campaign for your parish.

Guidance In Giving, Inc. offers its parish clients full-service campaign direction that is customized to the needs of each community. The firm understands that today's pastor faces many challenges. The challenges involve not only meeting the spiritual needs of his parishioners, but also the temporal needs of his parish. By designing and implementing an organized campaign plan, Guidance In Giving, Inc. aims to effectively use the time of pastors, parish staff and lay leadership to achieve the maximum financial potential. Our full- time, on-site service alleviates the worry that is sometimes associated with a fundraising campaign and allows parish leadership to concentrate on its most important mission, that of serving its people.

In a successful Stewardship-based capital campaign, every Catholic family is challenged to give prayerfully and proportionately to the best of their financial ability over a period of three to five years. Each and every gift is vitally important, therefore a key element of the campaign is to provide everyone the opportunity to make a decision after they have learned about the parish's needs. The most effective manner of educating each parish family and raising the maximum amount of funds is through personal education and solicitation. These personal solicitations can be done via visitation as well as small and large group receptions. These are the most commonly employed and most successful methods of raising funds.

OUR LADY OF POMPEI

Basilica of the National Shrine of the Immaculate Conception, Washington, DC

The first involvement of the Rambusch Decorating Company at "America's Parish Church" began with Our Lady of Lourdes Chapel in 1931. This newest chapel is an exquisite example of rare Giallo Siena marble and is replete with evocative Marian iconography enriched by Venetian and Roman mosaics. The natural luminosity in the chapel is enhanced by custom bronze pendant sanctuary lamps.

OUR LADY OF LOURDES PARISH

Wellfleet, MA

Twenty-two stained glass windows of the apostles, saints, the Luminous Mysteries and Our Lady's earthly appearances encircle the entire space of this perfectly proportioned new church and provide jewels of inspiration. Fifty-eight panels depicting the miracle at Lourdes fill the 370' east nave. Custom commissions involve many: architect, pastor, parish, artist. Deep satisfaction for all is the fruit of a successful collaboration.

PRIESTS FOR LIFE – MISSIONARIES OF THE GOSPEL OF LIFE

As Catholics, we have the unique opportunity to turn the abortion tragedy around.

This directory outlines the vast structure of the Catholic Church in the United States. Imagine how many people we reach through our parishes, schools, and other institutions. Then imagine what can happen as our priests infuse that vast structure with clear, vigorous, and compassionate pro-life teaching and action.

The Church is the only institution that has a Divine guarantee that it will prevail over the culture of death. "The gates of hell will not prevail against it," the Lord Himself said (Mt. 16:18). Those gates of hell cannot withstand the power of heaven. The gates of sin melt in the presence of grace; the gates of falsehood collapse in the presence of truth; the gates of death fall in the presence of the People of Life.

To fully engage the Church's response to the evils of abortion and euthanasia does not so much require more structure as it does more spirit, more awareness, more courage, and more determination to use both the means and the opportunities we already have.

That is what Priests for Life is all about. From the heart of the Church, it is a movement of priests helping the rest of the Church to use her full strength to build a Culture of Life, that we may all be missionaries of the Gospel of Life. Please join us today!

THE OFFICIAL CATHOLIC DIRECTORY GLOSSARY

Abbot

The superior of an autonomous community of men religious. He has general and sacramental jurisdiction over his community. The head of a prominent monastery or a congregation consisting of several monasteries is an archabbot.

Advocate

An ecclesiastical advocate is someone approved by Church authority to safeguard the rights of a party in a canonical process by arguments regarding the law and the facts of the case. [Cf. c. 1481 and CLSA Comm., p. 967]

Apostolate

Apostolate is the mission of Christ and participation in it. Its object is to bring Christ to others, its goal is the greater glory of God, its scope is universal. The work is carried out by every human agency by which the life of grace may be given or increased in the soul. A mandate from the Church is essential to the Catholic apostolate.

Archbishop

A bishop of a main or metropolitan diocese in an ecclesiastical province. The term is equivalent to metropolitan in the Western Church. It may also be granted to other ordinaries and non-residential bishops, and to the ordinary of a diocese outside a province.

Auditor

An official of a diocesan court, who gathers evidence and testimony and draws up a record of an ecclesiastical case.

Bishop

A bishop, by divine institution, carries on the work of the apostles. By reason of episcopal consecration, he shares in the triple apostolic function of teacher of doctrine, priest of sacred worship, and minister of church government. Bishops are responsible for the pastoral care of their dioceses. In addition, bishops have a responsibility to act in council to guide the Church. The term eparch is used in Eastern-rite churches.

The bishop to whom a particular or local church is entrusted is called a diocesan bishop or a residential bishop. Some other bishops receive Titular Sees over which they exercise no pastoral authority.

When the pastoral needs of a diocese or archdiocese warrant, an auxiliary bishop may be assigned to aid the residential bishop in governing his diocese. An auxiliary bishop is assigned when the residential bishop needs assistance in carrying out his duties because of ill health, advanced age, or amount of work. An auxiliary bishop does not have the right of succession within his diocese.

In special circumstances, such as the advanced age or ill health of a diocesan bishop, a coadjutator bishop may be appointed to assist the principal bishop of a diocese. Coadjutator bishops have the right of succession in the diocese of their appointment from the time the See becomes vacant upon the death or retirement of its bishop.

Brother

A man who is a member of a religious order, but is not ordained or studying for the priesthood.

Cana Conference

Censor Librorum

A theologian empowered by a bishop to judge a book's soundness in regard to Church teaching before publication.

Chancellor

The office of the chancellor (or the chancery) evolved from the practice in the early Church of appointing an official to sign and preserve the letters of the bishop. The first function of the chancellor in the present day is gathering, arranging, and safeguarding the acts of the diocesan curia. Dispensations and other official documents also originate from the chancery. In many dioceses, the chancellor continues to exercise ordinary jurisdiction as delegated by the diocesan bishop. He or she may be assisted by a separate official, the vice-chancellor.

Chapter

The general chapter of a religious order is an assembly of elected or appointed members and provincials. General chapters are convened for the election of officers, amendments to the constitution, and discussion and legislation of matters of concern to members and the order as a whole.

A provincial chapter conducts elections and handles legislation on a provincial level. The assembly is comprised of superiors and representatives of the religious.

A chapter of canons is a group of diocesan priests, appointed by the bishop of a diocese, with assigned authority or responsibilities.

College of Cardinals

The College of Cardinals is made up of the cardinals of the Church, who advise the Pope, assist in the central administration of the Church, head the various curial offices and congregations, administer the Holy See during a vacancy, and elect a new Pope. There are three ranks in the College of Cardinals, corresponding to the historical origins of cardinals in the Roman Catholic Church. All cardinals are bishops, but their rank within the College of Cardinals is characterized by one of the hierarchical ranks of bishop, priest, or deacon. Cardinals are given honorary title to churches in the city of Rome. [CF. c. 350; CLSA Comm., pp. 288-289]

1. Cardinal Bishops

There are two types of Cardinal Bishops: 1) those appointed by the Pope as titular bishops to one of the six suburban dioceses of Rome, and 2) Eastern-rite Patriarchs who are heads of Sees with apostolic origins that have been assigned to the College of Cardinals.

2. Cardinal Priests

Heads of Sees outside the city of Rome are assigned a "titular church," one of the churches in Rome. They have no pastoral authority over their titular church.

3. Cardinal Deacons

Cardinals of diaconal rank are bishops without Sees who head the various departments, offices, congregations, committees, and the Secretariat of State of the Roman Curia.

Confraternity of Christian Doctrine [CCD]

A lay organization established for religious education throughout a person's entire life. The term is currently used to describe Catholic parish-based religious education of children from kindergarten through high school. At the diocesan level, the offices are now more commonly known as offices of religious education or Christian formation. Nationally, the confraternity's religious education component has been taken over by the USCCB's Department of Education. It still exists as a separate entity under the USCCB Administrative Board, with responsibility for licensing religious and spiritual literature.

Consolidated School

The term, as used in the Directory, may refer to a school that takes students from more than one parish, or a school that was formed by the consolidation of two or three other schools. In both cases, it is a means of keeping a Catholic school in a given area open by taking students from the surrounding areas, regardless of parish boundaries.

It seeks to convey a new sense of individual and organized apostolic action. The program, conducted by priests and laypeople, consists of a three-day weekend focused on prayer, study, and Christian action, and a follow-up program known as the post-cursillo.

Deacons

The diaconate is the first order or grade in ordained ministry. Its origins are in early apostolic times, when deacons preached and baptized under the direction of the presbyters or bishops. Any man who is to be ordained to the priesthood must first be ordained as a transitional deacon. Deacons serve in the ministry of liturgy, of the word, and of charity.

In 1967, Pope Paul VI reinstituted the Permanent Diaconate for men who do not plan to become ordained priests. Although men ordained as permanent deacons are sometimes referred to as "married deacons," the permanent diaconate is open to both married and unmarried men, with the understanding that after ordination, they may not marry even after the death of a spouse. Under the authority of the diocesan bishop, they perform the same functions as the transitional deacons while, at the same time, retaining their roles in society as family and business men.

Dean/Vicar Forane

The title of a priest appointed by the bishop to aid him in administering the parishes in a certain vicinity, called a "deanery," or "vicariates forane." The function of a dean, or vicar forane, involves promotion, coordination, and supervision of the common pastoral activity within the deanery or vicariate.

Defender of the Bond

A member of a diocesan tribunal, either a cleric or a lay person, holding a graduate degree in canon law, who is appointed by the diocesan bishop for cases concerning the nullity of sacred ordination or the nullity or dissolution of the marriage bond. Diocese

The standard term for a territorial division of the Church, entrusted to a bishop who rules in his own name as local ordinary, and not as a delegate of another. The chief diocese of a province is an archdiocese. It is headed by an archbishop. Papal Representatives

There are three types of representatives of the Roman Pontiff:

1) those who represent him to particular churches and civil government;

2) those who represent him to particular churches;

3) those who represent him in international organizations or at various conferences and meetings. [Cf. c. 363; CLSA Comm., p. 302]

1. Apostolic Nuncio

In the United States, the papal representative is sent by the Pope to both the local church and to the government. His title is Apostolic Nuncio.

2. Legate

An individual appointed by the Pope to be his personal representative to a nation, international conference, or local church. The legate may be chosen from the local clergy of a country.

3. Permanent Observer to the United Nations

The Apostolic See maintains permanent legates below the ambassadorial level to several world organizations. Since the papal representative does not enjoy the right to vote within the organization, his title at the United Nations is that of Observer.

Parish

Most parishes are formed on a geographic basis, but they may be formed along national or ethnic lines.

The pastoral council's purpose is to study practical situations, difficulties and problems, and make concrete recommendations and proposals to the diocesan bishop. The pastoral council is always subject to the final authority of the pastor or bishop.

Patriarch

The Pope is the traditional "Patriarch of the West." All other bishops in the Latin Rite, even those with the honorary title of "Patriarch," are subject to him. Similarly, patriarchs within nations have only an honorary title unless special provisions are made otherwise. Eastern-rite Patriarchs are subject to the Pope while serving as heads of the faithful belonging to their rites throughout the world.

Personal Prelature

In addition to the territorial arrangement of the Church into particular or local churches or dioceses, canon law also provides for non-territorial areas of religious jurisdiction, incorporating secular clergy and deacons. Membership is also open to lay persons. These prelatures are established to meet specific pastoral or missionary needs at the regional, national, or international level without infringing on the rights of the local bishops. A prelature is presided over by a personal prelate, who is an ordinary with the right to establish seminaries and ordain priests as members of the prelature.

Canon law also allows for laity to be associated in the works of prelatures without being withdrawn from the jurisdiction of their own diocesan bishop.

Personal prelatures are jurisdictional structures of a secular type which are established by the Holy See as an instrument within the hierarchical pastoral work of the Church to carry out special pastoral or missionary tasks. Personal prelatures are based on the principle of insertion into the local Church. In this they differ essentially from the personal dioceses, such as those constituted for the faithful of a particular rite, which are based on the principle of independence or autonomy in regard to local Churches.

Vatican II provided for setting up personal prelatures (see Decree, Presbyterorum ordinis, no. 10). Additional norms were established in subsequent pontifical legislation (see Motu proprio Ecclesiae Sanctae no. 1, no. 4, August 6, 1966 and the Apostolic Constitution Regimini Ecclesiae Universae, no. 49, no. 1, Aug. 15, 1967). General legislation concerning personal prelatures is contained in canons 294 to 297 of the 1983 Code of Canon Law.

Personal prelatures are to be established by the Holy See after hearing the views of the respective Episcopal Conferences (can. 294). They are governed by a Prelate according to statutes given by the Holy See. The Prelate is their proper Ordinary, who may incardinate priests and must look after their spiritual and temporal welfare (can. 295). Lay people can dedicate themselves by means of a contractual agreement, to the apostolic activities of the prelature; the statutes are to specify the manner of this organic cooperation (can. 296). And the statutes are also to determine the relations of the prelature with the Ordinaries of the places in which the prelature works, with the prior consent of the Ordinaries (can. 297).

Presbyteral Council

Also known as the priests' council, the presbyteral council is the principal consultative body mandated by the Code of Canon Law to advise the diocesan bishop in matters of pastoral governance. It consists of bishops and priests serving the diocese.

They commit to serving their congregations and other institutions.

It is the semi-official philosophy of the Church.

Secular Institute

See

The word is taken from the Latin word "sedes" ("seat"), and is used to denote a diocese or ecclesiastical district. The term Holy See is reserved to the diocese of Rome whose bishop is the Pope. U.S. Territorial Sees are dioceses located on territory of the United States of America, but are members of episcopal confereences other than the United States Conference of Catholic Bishops.

Seminary

An educational institution for men preparing for Holy Orders. The term originates from the time of St. Augustine, when those preparing for the priesthood were educated in the "cathedral school." During the Middle Ages, the clergy were educated in a university setting where faculties of philosophy, theology, and canon law existed. Eventually individual dioceses or provinces came to establish their own schools for educating their clerical students. Traditional seminaries date from the Council of Trent in the 16th century.

A school for the spiritual, academic, and pastoral education and formation of priesthood candidates is known as a major seminary in which the focus is on philosophical and theological education. To prepare for entrance into a major seminary, a period of study is set aside for the required courses in the humanities and the sciences in institutions called minor seminaries.

PART I

Hierarchy of the Catholic Church

The Hierarchy, as the supreme governing body of the Catholic Church, consists of the Roman Pontiff, the successor of Peter, and the Bishops joined together with him and never without him (canons 330,331,336) in one apostolic college to provide for the common good of the Church. The Roman Pontiff in the exercise of his office is assisted by the College of Cardinals, and further by the departments also called "dicasteries" of the Roman Curia. The Bishops, of whom some bear the titles of Patriarch and Archbishop, are united with the Roman Pontiff in the governance of the whole Church; the Bishops, when assigned to particular Sees, are individually responsible for the teaching, sanctification and governance of their particular Church. Apostolic Vicars and Prefects together with certain Abbots and other Prelates are also joined in this work.

HIS HOLINESS THE POPE

Bishop of Rome and Vicar of Jesus Christ,
Successor of St. Peter, Prince of the Apostles,
Supreme Pontiff of the Universal Church.
Primate of Italy.
Archbishop and Metropolitan of the Roman Province,
Sovereign of Vatican City State.
Servant of the Servants of God

Benedict XVI

JOSEPH RATZINGER

The present successor of St. Peter was born in Marktl am Inn, Diocese of Passau, April 16, 1927; ordained Priest, June 29, 1951; appointed Archbishop of Munchen und Freising March 25, 1977 and consecrated May 28, 1977; Proclaimed and created Cardinal June 27, 1977. Elected Pope, April 19, 2005; installed April 24, 2005.

VATICAN CITY

Vatican City is the smallest state in the world, occupying 108.7 acres, of which about one third is covered with buildings and is situated on the right side of the Tiber River. Vatican City has territory, population, and sovereignity. This territory, limited as it is, suffices to guarantee the spiritual and temporal independence needed for the exercise of the Holy See's spiritual mission. In 1870 the Kingdom of Italy seized all Vatican possessions which for several centuries had constituted the papal temporal domain. But even after 1870 the Holy See continued to regard itself as a separate entity in international law, and was recognized as such by numerous states with which it retained normal diplomatic relations. After long discussions the Holy See and the then Kingdom of Italy signed the Lateran Pacts on February 11, 1929, so that the complete and independent authority of the Vatican State was and is recognized by the Italian state.

The Sovereign of this small state is His Holiness, the Pope.

The government presently is administered by a Pontifical Commission of which His Eminence Edmund Casimir Cardinal Szoka is President.

THE COLLEGE OF CARDINALS

The Cardinals constitute a special college and they assist the Roman Pontiff collegially when they are called together to deal with questions of major importance; they do so individually when they assist the Pope especially in the daily care of the universal Church by means of the different offices which they perform (canons 349-350). The Cardinals who are under eighty years of age elect his successor.

The College of Cardinals is divided into three ranks: Cardinal-Bishops, Cardinal-Priests, and Cardinal-Deacons. The College of Cardinals, when complete formerly consisted of 70 members: 6 Cardinal Bishops, 50 Cardinal Priests and 14 Cardinal Deacons, but the late Pontiffs, Pope John XXIII and Pope Paul VI enlarged the College of Cardinals. At the moment the maximum number of Cardinal electors (those under 80 years of age) must not exceed 120.

The Cardinal Bishops (except the Patriarch-Cardinals of the Oriental Rites), have as Titular Sees the Suburban Sees of Rome, which are: Porto Santa Rufina, Albano, Palestrina, Sabina, Frascati, Velletri, Segni. The Cardinal Dean has united to his See the See of Ostia. The Cardinal Priests take their title from the Titular Churches to which they are appointed: the Cardinal Deacons are appointed to other Churches called Deaconries. The first Cardinal Bishop is Dean; the first Cardinal Priest is First Priest; and the first Cardinal Deacon is First Deacon of the Sacred College. The Dean has the right of ordaining the new Pope if he is not already a bishop; the First Deacon has the right of proclaiming him and investing him with the sacred Pallium. On the death of the Pontiff, the Cardinal Camerlengo has the Administration of the affairs of the Holy See.

Sometimes the Roman Pontiff promotes a person to the dignity of Cardinal but does not make public his name and keeps it in pectore. Upon the publication of his name, this Cardinal enjoys his right of precedence from the day on which his name was reserved in pectore by the Pope (cfr. Can. 351¶ 3).

The Roman Curia

The present norms regarding the Roman Curia were publicly announced June 28, 1988, in the Pastor Bonus - Constitutio Apostolica de Romana Curia, and published in A.A.S. LXXX/1988, Commentarium Officiale; pp. 841-934. The Supreme Pontiff usually conducts business of the universal Church by means of the Roman Curia, which fulfills its duty in his name and by his authority for the good and the service of the Churches; it consists of the Secretariat of State or the Papal Secretariat, congregations, tribunals and other institutions, whose structure and competency are defined in special law (can. 360). The Roman curia is the complex of departments and institutes which assist the Roman Pontiff in the exercise of his supreme pastoral function for the good and service of the universal Church and of the particular churches, by which the unity of faith and communion of the people of God is strengthened and the mission is promoted which is proper to the Church in the world.

I. THE SECRETARIAT OF STATE TO HIS HOLINESS

The Secretariat of State

The Secretariat of State is the dicastery of the Roman Curia which works most closely with the Supreme Pontiff in the exercise of his universal mission (Pastor Bonus, Art. 39). The Secretariat of State is presided over by a Cardinal who assumes the title of Secretary of State. As the Pope's first Collaborator in the governance of the universal Church, the Cardinal Secretary of State is the one primarily responsible for the diplomatic and political activity of the Holy See, in some circumstances representing the person of the Supreme Pontiff himself.

The Secretariat of State includes two sections, namely: the First Section that is headed by an Archbishop, the Substitute for General Affairs, assisted by a Prelate, the Assessor for General Affairs; and the Second Section of the Secretariat of State headed by an Archbishop, the Secretary for Relations with States, aided by a Prelate, the Under-Secretary for Relations with States, and assisted by Cardinals and Bishops.

Secretary of State: His Eminence Tarcisio Cardinal Bertone.

Office: Apostolic Palace, 00120 Vatican City State, Europe. Tel: 06-69.88.39.13; Fax: 06-69.88.52.55.

By the name of department (dicasteria) is understood: the congregations, tribunals, councils and offices, namely the Apostolic Camera, the Administration of the Patrimony of the Apostolic See, and the Prefecture of Economic Affairs of the Holy See. The departments are juridically equal among themselves. Attached to the institutes of the Roman Curia are the Prefecture of the Papal Household and the Office of Liturgical Celebrations of the Supreme Pontiff.

The Congregation for the Doctrine of the Faith

The proper function of the Congregation on the Doctrine of the Faith is to promote and safeguard the doctrine of faith and morals in the whole Catholic world; therefore, those things belong to it which touch this matter in any way. Fulfilling the function of promoting doctrine, it fosters studies in order that the understanding of the faith might grow and that a response can be prepared under the light of faith for new questions arising from developments in science and human culture. It is a help to bishops, whether individually or gathered in assemblies, in the exercise of the function by which they are constituted authentic teachers and doctors of the faith as well as the office by which they are held to safeguard and promote the integrity of that faith. This Sacred Congregation reproves doctrines opposed to the principles of the faith after the interested Bishops of a region have been heard. It studies the books referred to it and, if necessary, reproves them after the author has been heard and has had an opportunity to defend himself and after the Ordinary has been forewarned. It also examines whatever concerns "the privilege of the faith" whether in law and in fact. It is competent to pass judgment on errors about the faith according to the norms of an ordinary process. It safeguards the dignity of the sacrament of Penance. The Congregation proceeds administratively or judicially according to the nature of the question to be treated.

Territories in which a major part of the Christians belong to Oriental rites are subject only to this Congregation. Even in Latin territories it carefully supervises the faithful of Oriental rites and provides as much as possible for their spiritual needs even by the establishment of their own hierarchy if the number of faithful and circumstances require this.

The Catholic Church in the United States

The organizational structure of the Catholic Church in the United States consists of 33 Provinces with as many Archdioceses (Metropolitan Sees); 149 Suffragan Sees (Dioceses); The Military Archdiocese; four Eastern-Rite jurisdictions immediately subject to the Holy See in Rome. The Eparchies of St. Maron (Maronites), Newton (Melkites), St. Thomas the Apostle of Detroit (Chaldeans) and St. George Martyr of Canton, Ohio (Romanians), St. Thomas of Chicago of the Syro-Malabarians. Each of these jurisdictions is under the direction of an Archbishop and Bishop called an Ordinary, who has apostolic responsibility and authority for the pastoral service of the people in his care.

The structure includes the territorial episcopal conference known as the United States Conference of Catholic Bishops. In and through this body, which is strictly ecclesiastical and has defined juridical authority, the Bishops exercise their collegiate pastorate over the Church in the entire country.

Related to the USCCB is the civil corporation and operational secretariat through which the Bishops, in cooperation with other members of the Church, act on a wider-than-ecclesiastical scale for the good of the Church and society in the United States.

The Official Catholic Directory™

In Print and Online 365 Days a Year

I had worked for 7 years in parish ministry at St. Clare Parish in the Archdiocese of Baltimore. I found the OCD very helpful for learning about (arch)diocese statistics, background in the American Catholic hierarchy, and most importantly, helping those folks who had moved away from their parish of baptism to identify the correct parish to obtain the needed paperwork for First Communions, Confirmations or Marriage. It's a great tool and wonderfully helpful.

United States Conference of Catholic Bishops

Address—3211 Fourth St., N.E., Washington, DC 20017-1194. Tel: 202-541-3000; Web Site: www.usccb.org.

The United States Conference of Catholic Bishops is a permanent institute composed of Catholic bishops of the United States of America in and through which the bishops exercise in a communal or collegial manner the pastoral mission entrusted to them by the Lord Jesus of sanctification, teaching, and leadership, especially by devising forms and methods of the apostolate suitably adapted to the circumstances of the times. Such exercise is intended to offer appropriate assistance to each bishop in fulfilling his particular ministry in the local Church, to effect a commonality of ministry addressed to the people of the United States of America, and to foster and express communion with the Church in other nations within the Church universal, under the leadership of its chief pastor, the Pope.

The mission of the National Catholic Conference for Total Stewardship (NCCTS) is to initiate in dioceses and parishes the concept of total stewardship through a pastoral process called Celebrating Life as a Catholic Christian (CLCC). The concept joins the three basic elements of the bible: Evangelization, Discipleship and Service, and through the CLCC process presents them as a single unit not as separate apostolates. The process first updates active church-going Catholics in sound catechetics and eucharistic spirituality. At the same time the process prepares and motivates them to reach out to lapsed, non-regular church-going Catholics making person-to-person contact with them and with RCIA graduates. They join a Small Ecclesial Faith Community (SEFC) connected to the parish. Active parishoners in SEFC's constitute a welcoming environment for those in need of returning to the faith and those in need of retaining it. In them they experience Catholic fellowship, inter-personal sharing, communal and personal prayer and study official church teachings. Through the CLCC process returnees and recent converts are further formed in doctrine and spirituality for full membership in the Church, for encountering Christ in the sacraments, for enjoying "communion" with all Catholics and for Celebrating Life as Catholic Christians both in vocation and mission.
